

Closer Examinations on the BRAIN LEVEL

Carrying out a brain CT scan

Whenever possible, a brain CT scan without contrast agent should be carried out in order to obtain visual proof of the conflict content and to examine the organic symptoms. All data must corroborate the findings; if this is not the case, then a huge amount of detective work would be required in a second attempt to pinpoint the source of the biological conflict.

Furthermore the risk of a brain edema with excessive swelling or even a heart attack needs to be assessed.
