

Closer Examinations on the ORGAN LEVEL

Establishing a complete anamnesis according to the guidelines for appropriate methods used in examining and diagnosing a patient.

These examinations and analyses are preferably carried out by a physician familiar with German New Medicine® or at least sympathetic towards the patient's choice of therapy and refraining from commenting the diagnostic findings.

For any examination on this level the germ layer of the affected organ (endoderm, mesoderm, ectoderm) must be determined. Symptoms must be classified and interpreted based on GNM research findings.

Explaining the developments and predicting further symptoms.

The patient learns in detail what has happened so far and how his symptoms may change in the course of the disease. The patient will also learn why this has to happen. In doing this the patient will comprehend how the GNM works. Once he experiences one of the symptoms previously explained to him, he will gain higher trust and self-confidence and will not succumb to unnecessary feelings of panic. This, in fact, is one of the primary requirements for healing, for only a patient who has gained confidence in the truth of the GNM will not be swayed by "well-meaning" advice from others.

All therapeutic measures must always be delivered according to current state of the "disease". The choice of therapeutic measures depends on whether the patient is still in the conflict active phase or whether he has already reached the healing phase.

Therapy always takes a simultaneous, three-pronged approach on the three levels - psyche – brain – organ, even if these are listed here separately! Whatever happens on one level automatically influences the other two levels.

The following remarks refer to cases with a single conflict. If a patient presents with multiple conflicts, these have to be treated in layers.
